

Criminal Defendant

Plaintiff

Bailiff

Bailiff

Witness

Judge

Court Reporter

Juror

Prosecutor

Court Clerk

Victim

Criminal Defense Attorney

Judicial Assistant

Civil Attorney for the Defendant

Criminal Defendant

Civil Attorney for the Plaintiff

Victim

Court Reporter

Juror

Criminal Defense Attorney

Civil Attorney for the Defendant

Civil Defendant

Civil Attorney for the Plaintiff

Judicial Assistant

Court Clerk

Judge

Plaintiff

Witness

Civil Defendant

Prosecutor

When I'm in the courtroom, I use a computer to take official notes about what happens.

When my judge is not in the courtroom, I help keep things running smoothly in the judge's chambers.

Before a trial, I study the law, talk to witnesses, and gather evidence to build a case to show that the defendant violated my client's rights. Often I work with the other side's lawyer to try to settle the case without a trial.

During a trial, I present evidence to convince the jury that the defendant violated my client's rights and owes something to my client.

Before a trial, I keep records of all the documents the lawyers send to my judge. I keep my judge organized by keeping track of how the case is proceeding as it moves toward trial.

Before a trial, I give my lawyer as much information as I can to help her prove that I did not break the law or violate the other person's rights.

Before a trial, I study the law, talk to witnesses, and gather evidence to build a case to prove the defendant committed a crime. I also negotiate with the other side to offer the defendant the most fair punishment.	During a trial, I sit with my lawyer and hope the judge or jury will decide I did not commit a crime. I probably won't tell my side of the story, because the Constitution says I don't have to testify against myself.	When I'm not in the courtroom, I am busy editing transcripts I typed during other court proceedings like hearings or trials.
Before a trial, I study the law, talk to witnesses, and gather evidence to build a case to show my client did not break the law or violate anyone's rights. Often I work with the other side's lawyer to try to settle the case without a trial.	Before a trial, I read all the documents that each side files with the court so I know what's going on. I also go in the courtroom to make decisions about different issues that come up as the lawyers prepare for trial.	When my judge is in the courtroom, I'm in the courtroom too. I get things the judge needs and makes sure there is order in the court.
During a trial, I sit with my lawyer and hope that the judge or jury will decide my rights were violated and order the other side to pay me back.	During a trial, I sit next to my lawyer and hope that the judge or jury will decide I did not break the law or violate the other person's rights. I will probably get up and tell my side of the story.	Before a trial, I study the law, talk to witnesses, and gather evidence to build a case to prove my client is innocent of any crime. If I can't do that, I work to get my client the most fair punishment.

When I'm in the courtroom, I transcribe what everyone says word for word.	Before a trial, I meet with lawyers and tell them what I heard or saw, to help them prepare their cases.	Before a trial, I will give the prosecutor as much information as I can to help her convict the person who committed a crime against me.
During a trial, I come to the courtroom to testify about what I heard or saw.	During a trial, I present evidence to convince the jury that my client did not violate the other side's rights and does not owe the other side anything.	During a trial, I am around to make sure the lawyers and the judge have everything they need.
During a trial, I present evidence to convince the jury that my client did not commit a crime.	When I'm not in the courtroom, I finish up the official notes I took in the courtroom. I also mark all the evidence the lawyers want to use during the trial and give each piece of evidence a number.	Before a trial, I am just a regular citizen going about my business.

Before a trial, I give my lawyer as much information as I can to help him either prove did not commit a crime or show why my punishment should not be so severe.	During a jury trial, I make sure the lawyers follow courtroom rules and I explain to the jury what the law says so they can make a decision.	During a trial, I present evidence to convince the jury that the defendant committed a crime.
Before a trial, I give my lawyer as much information as I can to help him prove that my rights were violated.	During a trial, I might sit in the courtroom and watch the trial if it is not too upsetting for me. I am not involved in the trial because the state presses charges against that person for me.	During a trial, I listen carefully to all the evidence so I can help. Then I will go into a room with the rest of my group to decide what really happened.

i★CIVICS
www.ICIVICS.org

i★CIVICS
www.ICIVICS.org

i★CIVICS
www.ICIVICS.org

i★CIVICS
www.ICIVICS.org

i★CIVICS
www.ICIVICS.org

i★CIVICS
www.ICIVICS.org

i★CIVICS
www.ICIVICS.org

i★CIVICS
www.ICIVICS.org

i★CIVICS
www.ICIVICS.org